

Title image: © Somalgors74, www.somalgors74.ch

TKI open 21_ausbaden*

Since March we are finding out how life can change in one fell swoop. Suddenly what was unthinkable becomes possible. No flying to spare the climate? Difficult. Giving up the luxury of global capitalism? Better not. With COVID-19 everything changes (for now): reduced to the 'bare necessities', airports and industry almost at standstill, emissions falling. We refocus – at least temporarily and superficially – on solidarity and responsibility, save resources through virtuality. Corona means a sustainability hiatus of the kind the climate crisis should have been long ago. But the social and political fallout of both crises is deficient, short-sighted and produces exclusions. What now?

Art and culture are predestined places of playful, but also stringent negotiating. They can re-evaluate what is no longer obvious or undisputed. They can discover and invent what we need for the best possible future.

TKI open 21 is looking for artistic and cultural projects that tackle 'fallout' in the widest sense. Projects that may make us aware that we are all in this together. What we (had to) fall out of and why. Projects could explore new strategies of living together and try out coping with the consequences. Set playful impulses against wasteful and exploitative forms of living or for a sustainable society. Make a splash, come into the flow and let alternative action spring up.

Text: Katharina Serles

*lit. "bathing it out" = coping with the fallout of a measure

Criteria

- Explicit engagement with the theme of the call
- Originality and quality of the realisation
- Reference to Tyrol
- Realisation of the project within the year 2021
- Sensitive handling of gender issues and societal mechanisms of exclusion, in the wording of the project, its concept and its realisation

Online submission

Please email your project proposal in German in pdf format to office@tki.at.

The proposal must include:

- Completed form with the basic details (download from www.tki.at)
- Detailed description of the project (5 pages max.)
- Calculation of the costs, plus funding plan
- Schedule for the realisation of the project
- Details on the proposers

Who can enter?

Charitable cultural initiatives and collectives as well as individuals

Who cannot enter?

- * Public bodies, party-political or religious organisations or commercial cultural event organisers and businesses
- * Ongoing or completed projects or projects already funded by TKI open (repeat projects)
- * Projects that already receive support from the cultural department of the federal administration of Tyrol

Funding

TKI open 21 has a total of 100.000 euros of funding available from the federal administration of Tyrol. The selected projects may be fully funded by TKI open

Jury

A jury of experts from the region and beyond will select the most convincing projects in a public jury meeting and will recommend these for funding to the federal administration of Tyrol. Only one project per entrant can be selected.

Dates

- Submission of proposals closes at midnight on Saturday, 10.10.2020.
- The public jury meeting is on Saturday, 14.11.2020.

Information and Advice Event

Friday 2.10.2020, 5 p.m. Register per e-mail at office@tki.at

Legal framework

Submission of a project proposal does not give rise to legal claims. The decision will be made without recourse to legal action. Funding of the selected projects will be handled by the cultural department of the federal administration of Tyrol.

Fair Pay & self-remuneration

In your calculations, please consider Fair Pay and, for individual entrants, note the funding guidelines on Eigenhonorare (self-remuneration) on (www.tki.at). If you have questions, please contact us, we are happy to advise you!

Contact and Information

TKI – Tiroler Kulturinitiativen
Helene Schnitzer
Dreiheiligenstraße 21a, 6020 Innsbruck
0680 2109254, office@tki.at, www.tki.at